Types of Occupations Participants Can Be Trained For	Training should be given priority over other types of services. Emerging or expanding industries should be the focus, especially those in your WIOA regional plan and those on Ohio's In-Demand Jobs list. One grant goal is to increase the number of professionals trained to impact the causes and treatment of the opioid crisis, so areas should focus on these occupations as well.	1) For individuals who volunteer that they, a family member or a friend have been impacted by the opioid crisis, training may be in any in-demand occupation. 2) For individuals who state they are not impacted by the opioid crisis or do not respond, occupational skills training is limited to the following fields: -Addiction treatment -Mental health treatment focused on conditions that can lead to or exacerbate opioid addition -Pain management services and practices -Other occupations approved by DOL specific to each "community", based upon their identified opioid impacts.	1) For individuals who volunteer that they, a family member or a friend have been impacted by the opioid crisis, training may be in any in-demand occupation. 2) For individuals who state they are not impacted by the opioid crisis or do not respond, occupational skills training is limited to the following fields: -Addiction treatment -Mental health treatment focused on conditions that can lead to or exacerbate opioid addition -Pain management services and practices -Other occupations approved by DOL specific to each "community", based upon their identified opioid impacts.
